What's New in Planview Projectplace

Q3 – 2018

Summer is here! In honor of the warm weather and vacation season, we are pleased to be focused on end-user needs for the next quarter. Through user feedback and our commitment to usability, this release cycle will be focused on providing robust enhancements to familiar tools.

My Overview enhancements

Planning your day isn't always the easiest task. With meetings, work related action items, personal to-do's, and everything in between, your workload can get out of hand easily. In the July release of Planview Projectplace®, we plan to make it possible for you to take more control over your day and your personal workload. Group your most important tasks, force rank, and execute. The ability to organize your work by project, due date, and task type will simplify your morning planning regiment and set your day up for success.

Workload improvements

Understanding resource availability is crucial when planning and executing on new work. Without a solid understanding of capacity and demand, you're putting your business at risk of losing time and money due to poor resource planning. With Projectplace's new enhancements to the Workload management tool, you will be able to drive planning and execution with a keen eye on resource management. In our August release, we are making it possible to see workload based on the estimated time on all cards assigned to your team members and their general capacity on a weekly basis.

Document review workflows

Projectplace offers robust functionality in document management, versioning, and reviews. The time has come to make these features even more powerful. In an upcoming release, we will provide the ability to create document review workflows. This will allow you to set up a complete review process, in which you can send reviews to a chain of people for approval. Once one user has completed their document review, the next review will be kicked off. This simple, yet powerful feature will streamline the document review process for users and organizations needing a step by step approval workflow.

Other enhancements

As always, we will be delivering frequent enhancements to some of the most used tools in Projectplace. Cards will be improved with more labels, filtering will be available by custom fields in both Documents and Boards, and Account Administration will be uplifted with a modernized user interface and some improved statistics on the account usage. We will also be providing performance enhancements as well as bug fixes throughout the next three months to maintain the best possible user experience.
